HIS GREATEST BLUFF. Engene Field's Genius Recognized

by One of His Creditors. Slason Thompson's life of Eugene Field. which was published last week, is the most faithful portrait of the Western poet and paragrapher that has yet been made It is not by any means complete. He would be a brave biographer who would write unreservedly of the real Eugene Pield on he was known to his intimate friends and fellow craftsmen; for, as with Robert Louis Stevenson, there has been built up a bulwark of tradition that precludes the possibility of anything other than a popular life. than a popular life.

Mr. Thompson relates many amusing meedoten of his friend, but the best stores of Engene Field will never appear in becks ! One in particular is worthy of preservation. It was when the poet was a reperier in Kansas City. Like many newspaper man of that day he was inclined to be bibulous, and was in a chronic state of bankrapicy.

State of bankraptey.
His particular friend was a restaurant His particular friend was a research feeper named Brascona and for certain commedities Field had run up a full of estentations propertions. One day Brascom asked Field if he could guess the nameunt of his indebtedness. "No," said com asked Field if he could guess the amount of his indebtedness. "No," said Field. "but I hope that it is not more than I can pay when my salary is raised."

"My boy," continued the healen Brascom, "the bill is $150. I despair of your ever notting your salary raised, and yet I know that your aesthetic soul revolts against debt. Now I'll fix it for you. If you will give me 25 cents I il gall the bill settled."

AN INTERNATIONAL POW-WOW. Novel Bisante Between English Cot-

oner and American Naval Officer. A novel point of international interest has arisen at Southampton. lying off Nettly for some days, and at 5 o'clo.k one morning a member of her crew was found unconscious in a boat lying alongside. He was lifted on deck and died soon afterward. The ship's doctors made a post-mortem examination, and an enquiry was held on board, with the re-enquiry was held on board, with the result that, so far as those on the vessels were concerned, the cause of death was satisfactorily made out.

An officer went ashore and arranged for a funeral, with full naval honors, in Southampton Cemelery. A handsome coffin was ordered, and florists were compalisationed to prepare some lovely wreaths. Whon the registers of ceaths was called upon a difficulty arose. He feit that he could not seespt the certificate of death, which was signed by the ship's doctor, not only because, said the registers, it was not made out by a registered medical practitioner, but also because death was not the result of natural causes. He, therefore, referred the American officer to the coroner.

The coroner was then seen, and he said came within his jurisdiction, and it would be his duty to hold an inquest. To this the representative of the ship demurred, pointing out that the deceased was not a British subject, and that it was not an English vessel, nor even a merchantmin.

The coroner cited English law, and was answered with quotations from the American mayal regulations. The organish was pursued in perfect good temper, but neither side would give way, and the position was the more complicated because the ship was due to sall in-a few hours. Eventually the grand funeral was aban-doned, and the vessel left at the appointed with the man's body on board.

Bls Lamp Wick Drove a Family Out

of Boors . Numerous complaints have recently been received at the office of the Assistant Attorney General for the Postoffice Department against the inventor of a extensively advertised Indestructible lamp wick. The inventor of the wick says it is the greatest thing ever put on the market, It costs only a moderate sum and will last forever, that it gives a light, when used with any kind of oil from while to kerosene, that is better than electricity and cheaper then gas, and that pective purchasers is a card containing on one side the picture of a little boy studying his lessons by the light of the student lamp. On the other side of the card is a picture showing an old, grayhaired man reading a newspaper by the of a lamp !dentical to that shown

A printed explanation on the card informs the reader that although the boy grew from childhood to menhood and then to old age, the wick that furnished the light that illuminated his first grade primer is the same identical one by which e now reads his evening paper. The inventor did a thriving business now. The mest serious complaint received at the department is from a man who says he is going to sue the inventor of the patent indestructible witk for damages to his house and furniture and for the manount of a doctor's bill.

He says he was impressed by the litersture sent out by the insentor and purchased an indestructible tamp wick. He lit she week and then consider out to chared an indestructable lamp wick. He lit the wick and then couldn't put it out. It smoked like a chimney, and he finally had so take his family out in the front yards to prevent their being suffocated while he removed the lamp to the back yard and held it under the pump.

smoke stuck to the wall and blackened the lace curtains, hangings and fur-niture of his home, tesides smelling most aboutinable. He wante financial satisfac-tion for the damages to his home and asks the department to make the invesof the patent wick pay the doctor's bill contracted in treatment of one of his children who caught cold while sitting in the front yard.

SCOLDING A PRINCESS.

Telephones can be very treacherous instruments at times. One evening, when Prince of Wales, the King was at a pub-He dinger at which he was to speak. During the ment he told an equery to send for a book, to which he wished to refer for a fast, from Marlborough House. The equerry gave the necessary instructions, and the hotel manager rang the royal residence up on the telephone. After he had made himself understood there was a pause of many minutes. He rang algain, then again, until at last looing all patience, he literally shouted "Are-you-there? What the — do you mean by keeping His Royal Highness waiting? Can you had the book or not?"

you find the book or not?"

To his angry expostulations came the quiet answer. We are very sorry to keep you walting: we are doing our best to find the book, which shall be sent on at once. Please tell my father this, because he is so particular." It was the first, and doubtless he hopes it will be the last time, that the manager had ever rated a princess through a telephone.-M. A. P.
